

ANS are pleased to announce the successful launch of the ANS Living Screen.

Finally unveiled in January, the system is proving a large success. The system comes complete with bespoke planting, irrigation system, lighting, water tank and even wheels for complete manoeuvrability! With a large number of orders rolling in, installations taking place and the first unit about to leave for Denmark, things are looking good...!

Growing up

Fermoy Road, North London

Amidst the dust and traffic of busy North London, a vertical landscape has been installed at the end of a 5 storey residential block of flats. The vertical landscape helps reduce the noise levels of city traffic, thereby creating a welcoming environment for the residents.

Living walls get their wings

Sheltered behind number 5 Hannover Square, you will now find the expanse of a living wall, specifically designed for local ecology, providing a habitat for birds and bats. The ANS system can be specifically adapted to take bird and bat boxes and even insect hotels. Boxes can be supplied to suit any species of bird (within reason...)

Just between

Megaro Hotel, London

The internal walls at the Megaro Hotel in London really put the 'icing on the cake', so to speak. With 4 interior walls installed throughout the hotel, the place was ready to throw open it's doors!

Give it some stick

Montpellier Square, London

Another prime example of how the ANS System can be used. A natural, fresh and embracing appearance was achieved at this private residence, incorporating European hardwood to achieve a unique, decorative finish.

And a final piece of good news is that ANS have just secured the contract for a living wall at the Mermaid Conference Centre. The Living Wall has been sponsored by TfL (Transport for London), with money coming from the Clean Air Fund. Some interesting concepts are being discussed for the design; more to come in the next ANS Bulletin.
